New York, Jan. 16.—General Harrison manages to spend a portion of each day while here in the company of his reported fiancée, Mrs. Dinmick. Last evening the couple eluded the newspaper men and occupied parquet seats at the Lyceum Theatre, listening to Pinerols "The Benefit of a Doubt." After the performance they were recognized, but they skillfully avoided congratulations and some embarrassment by escaping through the managers room to the street.

The feeling in the social circles in which the President moves is that the wedding will take place at no distant day. It is believed that the family is now entirely reconciled. When Secretary Tibbets was questioned about the matter he answered: "General Harrison never does anything in a clandestine way," which was interpreted to mean that a formal announcement will be made at the proper time.
